FIELD INSPECTION OF CROPS FOR REGISTRATION OR CERTIFICATION

Because of wartime restrictions and shortage of trained inspectors it is essential that field inspections of standing crops of cereals or forage be made as economically as possible. It will, therefore, be necessary that growers wishing such inspection make their applications in good time. It has been decided that applications for forage crop inspections must be made prior to July 1 and those for cereal inspections before July 10.

Application forms can be secured from, and must be returned promptly to:

Production Service, Plants
Products Division,
Dominion Dept. of Agriculture,
Immigration Building,
Calgary, Alberta.

Growers who neglect making application prior to the specified dates may not receive service this season. It is, therefore, to the grower's interest that his application for this service should be filed promptly.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank all our friends and neighbors for their help and expressions of sympathy and for the floral tributes at this time of our sad bereavement.

A.F.U. Notes

"Are your feet under the table?" There is much to be gained by frank discussion of the problems of agriculture.

Every month the men who are elected as directors of the A.F.U. sit around a table in the head office. They discuss problems affecting the farmers and decide matters of administration and operation of the union.

Out in the country, too, the members of the union gather at their local meetings and at constituency conventions to discuss their business. They, too, have their feet under the conference table and they, too, make decisions and send them in to be considered by the directors when they meet.

By this means every member has the right and privilege to get his feet under the conference table and participate in the operations of the organization. They assist in the direction of their own union, the A.F.U., of which they are a part.

Farmers might ponder the thought that in all matters of policy governing the farmers' interest someone has his feet under the table.

The pointed question would appear to be "Are your feet under the table?"

ALBERTA'S NEW PREMIER

As was expected, the Social Credit party did not wait long to select a new leader as well as premier of the province after the death of Premier Aberhart in Vancouver. And it was not altogether unexpected that the mantle would fall upon Hon. E. C. Manning, minister of trade and industry and provincial secretary in the late Aberhart cabinet. Mr. Manning has been an intimate friend and colleague of the late premier for the past seventeen years. Coming to Calgary as youth he became a pupil of Mr. Aberhart's both in the prophetic Bible Institute and in the Social Credit movement which swept the province in 1935 like a prairie fire.

In taking over the reins of government as well as leader of a party that sprang up under such spectacular circumstances and under such a dominant personage as the late Mr. Aberhart, the new premier has a big job on his hands. With eight years of experience as a cabinet minister and close con-

Recent periodicals from England show pictures of teen age school boys and girls helping with the work on victory gardens and on farms during their school vacation. Here is an example, it would seem, that Canadian boys and girls from our high schools and universities could well copy.

Working on a farm for young city people is a veritable education in itself, particularly for teen age boys and girls. These young people with their keen minds and observant eyes would see something of the natural growth and development of plants and animals, something of the great mysteries of life itself. They would observe, too, how differently human beings behave in these quiet natural surroundings than in the midst of the artificial conditions of city life. All in all, then, working on a farm for a few weeks would be a most wholesome and worthwhile experience for our Canadian boys and girls.

There is, however, a much higher reason than all this for our young people to consider working on farms during their holidays, which is that it would certainly help to provide more food for Canada's war effort, and so, of course would be a highly patriotic action to perform.

tact with the former premier, and with youth in his favor, Mr. Manning should develop into one of Canada's leading political figures in the strenuous years that lie ahead.

Hon. E. C. Manning Elected Premier

Hon. Ernest Manning, former provincial secretary and minister of trade and industry in the government of the late Hon. William Aberhart, is the new premier of Alberta. He was elected unanimously at a Social Credit party caucus in the legislative buildings Monday morning.

Thirty-four years old, he is the youngest premier in Canada. When he first took office in 1935, under Mr. Aberhart, he was the youngest cabinet minister in the British Empire.

In precedent-shattering ceremonies in the office of His Honor Lt. Gov. J. C. Bowen, Premier Manning was sworn into office before the whole caucus. The election, announcement and swearing-in took a matter of a few minutes, and Alberta's Social Credit government again had a leader.

Here is the oath Mr. Manning took upon assuming the premiership:

"I, Ernest Charles Manning, do solemnly and sincerely promise and swear that I will duly and faithfully and to the best of my skill and knowledge, execute the powers and trusts reposed in me as president of the council for the province of Alberta. So help me God."

Premier Manning was born on Sept. 20, 1908, at Carnduff, Saskatchewan. He was educated in Saskatchewan.

An early follower of Mr. Aberhart, he and the late premier had been friends for the past 17 years.

Mr. Manning had long been regarded as Premier Aberhart's right-hand man and closest confidant.

Premier Manning is married and has two children, William Keith, 4 years old, and Ernest Preston, one year old.

Viking Items

The Viking Students Union sponsored a semi-formal dance in the Elks hall last Friday evening. Several students from Wainwright, Holden, Killam, and Irma accepted invitations to be present and enjoyed the evening dancing to the music of the Holden Jive Bombers orchestra. Members of the local school board and other citizens were present at this enjoyable affair. Lunch was served.

Here it is June 2nd and no summer yet. Old-timers are beginning to talk about this and that year that had no summer to speak of, but we hope they're wrong about 1943, and you can look forward to some hot days in July and August.

The Eighth Army

DURING RECENT MONTHS the progress of Britain's Eighth Army in Africa rarely failed to occupy a leading position in the daily war news. During the early part of the fighting in Africa, the term "Eighth Army" had no special significance, but it is now the symbol of a great fighting force whose fame will never be forgotten. For two and a half years and more, this force has fought on the desert and it has come to be known as "an army of young veterans." The aptness of this title is borne out by the fact that there are a number of battalion commanders who are under thirty, including several of twenty-three and twenty-four and there are brigadiers of thirty-five and thirty-six. All the armoured divisions of the Eighth Army are from the United Kingdom. The infantry includes the famous Fifty-First Highland Division, and the Fifteenth Division in which there are many men from the North of England. With them have fought troops from Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and India.

Supply Problem Ably Handled

Much has been written of the magnificent leadership given to the Eighth Army by General Montgomery, under whom it made its epic advance from El Alamein to Tunisia. During this advance the Army was supported by the longest supply line used by any fighting force in the world in this war. The line stretched 12,000 miles, from Britain around the Cape of Good Hope to Egypt. To this line of communication by sea was added an ever-lengthening land line, as the army made its rapid advance. If it had not been for the perfect organization of the system of supply the progress of the army could not have been so swift, and great tribute has been paid to Lieut.-Gen. Sir Wilfrid Lindell, who was in charge of this part of the campaign. In addition to the enormous quantity of regular supplies needed, there was the problem of bringing in fresh water which raised the daily 400-ton requirement of stores for an army division to 520 tons. We are told that all supplies, from tanks to cakes of soap were delivered on schedule, and that every man in the Eighth Army partook of a Christmas dinner.

Advance Marked Turning Point

The problem of repairs was also a great one in this highly-mechanized campaign. It is said that in the first month of the advance one thousand tanks were brought out of battle, repaired, and sent back into action. In one period of twenty-four hours eighty-eight heavy tanks were repaired in the battle area, this six of them being done by one corps alone. This work was done by the Quarter-master General's Staff, supported by the newly-formed Corps of Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers, which have recovered and repaired many mechanical vehicles behind the lines and in the battle area. The victorious advance of the Eighth Army in Africa has been one of the turning points towards an Allied victory, and its effect on the morale of the people of the United Nations has been very great. In the records of this war, the campaign of the Army in Africa will no doubt be treated as an event of outstanding significance.

VITAMIN A is the vitamin needed particularly for the eyes but it is also important for all the body tissues, especially the mucous membranes. If these are kept in healthy condition, we shall be less susceptible to infections, including colds. Vitamin A will not prevent colds, but by keeping the tissues of the respiratory tract healthy we are less susceptible to infection and any illness we may suffer as a result of infection is likely to be less severe.

A common condition due to Vitamin A deficiency is a form of night blindness; that means simply inability to see clearly in the dark. Our best and easiest, and also cheapest, way to get Vitamin A is from carrots. One carrot per day will give more than half the total amount the body needs. One teaspoon of cod liver oil provides more than a day's requirement. Green vegetables, such as spinach and lettuce, and yellow vegetables, such as carrots, sweet potatoes and squash, contain large amounts of the vitamin. There is more than a day's needs in an average serving.

Vitamin A is not destroyed in cooking, so that this is one vitamin easily provided, if we see to it that we get one yellow or green vegetable daily. Raw vegetables are always better as they contain more of the other vitamins and the minerals.

Has No Securities

Rudolf Hess Could Not Touch Them If He Had

Rudolf Hess is still confined under the same conditions imposed on his arrival in this country following his mysterious flight from Germany in 1941. Foreign Secretary Eden told the House of Commons.

Answering the latest of a series of questions concerning Britain's most intriguing prisoner, Mr. Eden denied that Hitler's deputy had brought £15,000 worth of British securities to Britain or that any member of his family is here.

The question was asked by William J. Thorpe, Labor, who said he understood the securities were "being used to pay for the keep of Hess and his family in this country."

Mr. Eden said Hess brought with him only a few mark notes, worth nothing in Britain, and that even if Hess had in earlier years made any investments in Britain, as an enemy prisoner he would not have been able to touch them.

Different This Time

Present War Has Been Kinder To Britain's Military Leaders

This has been a much kinder war to Britain's military leaders than the struggle of 1914-18. There has been no spectacular resignation and very little sacking. Generals have been removed from their posts and admirals transferred, but it has all been done in an atmosphere of finding other use for their great abilities.

Wavell went to India after the reverses in Libya that followed the ill-starred Greek intervention. Auchinleck succeeded Wavell, but he, too, went when Rommel invaded Egypt. Admiral Sir Tom Phillips might have been recalled if he had not gone down with the Prince of Wales.

But on the whole there is no comparison with the upsets of the last war.

Almost at the beginning of the last war Prince Louis of Battenberg, the First Sea Lord, was brought down by public clamor. Then two admirals were finished by the escape of the Goeben and Breslau to Turkey.

With the courtliness of our race, Rear-Admiral Troubridge was honorably exonerated by a court martial, while the Board of Admirals declared that Admiral Sir Bergey Milne had done everything he could. But it was the end of both of them.

General Sir Ian Hamilton, commanding our forces in Gallipoli, refused to have anything to do with such a dangerous and cowardly move as the withdrawal from the Peninsula. That finished him.

Sir John French was recalled from his post as commander-in-chief after the heavy losses at the battle of Loos.

Lord "Jack" Fisher, when First Sea Lord, pulled down the blinds of his office and went to Scotland. He intended thereby to break Winston Churchill as First Lord. He succeeded as far as Churchill was concerned, but found he had pulled down the blinds on his own career.

Sir Hubert Gough was removed from his command of the Fifth Army after the German attack in 1918. Sir William Robertson, the C.I.G.S., who had risen from the ranks, quarreled with Mr. Lloyd George, and lost the verdict. General Sir Frederick Maurice, while director of military operations, wrote a letter to the press blaming the defeat of 1918 on Mr. Lloyd George, "who kept a huge body of troops at home because of a panic, hypothetical invasion." And after a debate in Parliament Sir Frederick went.

Sir John Jellicoe won the Battle of Jutland and was "promoted" to First Sea Lord. His rival, Sir David Beatty, replaced him as commander-in-chief of the Home Fleet. Then Jellicoe went on a special mission to the Empire and Beatty took over as First Sea Lord.

After the war Jellicoe was given an earldom and £250,000. Beatty was given an earldom and $500,000. That was Lloyd George's verdict on Jutland.

The wonder is that Haig survived. As Mr. Damon Runyon would say: "He disliked Mr. Lloyd George more than somewhat," while Mr. Lloyd George took a much lower view of the commander-in-chief than did his ultimate biographer, Mr. Duff Cooper.

No Energy Wasted

New Airplane Engines Produce Electricity During The Test Run

After years of idle running on test-stands for the breaking-in process, new airplane engines have been given useful work to do. Hooked up with an ordinary electric generator of the type normally driven by a Diesel engine, one engine can produce about 2,000 kilowatt-hours of electrical energy during its test run. Every newly completed aircraft engine is given what engineers call a "green" run in a special test cell. Then it goes back to the factory to be taken apart, inspected and reassembled for the final break-in run. Generators thus used in one factory produce more than 4,000,000 kilowatt-hours, worth about $24,000, which is enough to drive the factory's lathes, drills, and grinders, heating machines and other tools used in manufacturing the engines, as well as to light the factory. They also aid in the tests, since by measuring the electricity generated engineers can tell whether the engine is running properly—Popular Mechanics.

The Poultry Industry

Now Faced With Greatest Demand It Has Ever Known

The poultry industry of Canada during the next 12 months will be faced with the greatest demand for eggs and poultry it has ever known. At least 100,000,000 dozen eggs will be required for export alone to several countries. In addition, the requirements of the armed forces have doubled since the first year of war and the civilian domestic situation is demanding more and still more eggs.

Russian Play About Merchant Ships Was Performed At Archange

Not many miles outside the Arctic Circle a play on the theme of the northern convoys between Britain and the Soviet Union has been performed, writes our special correspondent in Moscow.

It is Yuri Herman's Here's to Those on Passage, and was running at the Grand Dramatic Theatre at Archange, where it was produced to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the Red Army. Its popularity was said to be considerable. The play, in four acts, describes the adventures of two merchant ships, one Russian, the other British, and the relations between the respective crews. A close friendship exists between the Georgian captain of the one, Saltykov-Sheredn and Captain Sullivan of the other, as Carmencia, and this is sealed in the play's climax when, during 76 hours bombing and torpedo attacks, the British vessel is lost and the captain rescued and given musical honors.—Rule, Britannia! on Flute—

REALLY WORTH IT
With a sparkle in his eyes, the young fellow walked into the show-room.

"If I bought this car by instalments," he said, pointing to a particularly "sporty" model, "how long would it take me to pay for it?"

"That would depend on how much you could afford each month, sir," replied the salesman, cautiously.

The young man scratched his chin.

"Well, I think I could manage three dollars a month."

"Three dollars a month!" he gasped. "At that rate it would take a hundred years!"

Gazing longingly at the very stream-lined model, the young man said:

"So what? It's worth it!"

Going Too Far

Man On Leave Found Wife Wearing His Favorite Clothes

Coming home on leave the other day a friend of mine decided to go into "clivies." He searched in vain for the new grey flannel suit bought just before joining up. He took up the matter with his wife.

"Where's my flannel suit?" he demanded suspiciously.

"Well—er," she began, and glanced self-consciously at the costume she was wearing. It was of grey flannel. "I didn't think you'd be needing it," she explained apologetically, "and it looked a shame to leave it hanging in the wardrobe."

Worse was to follow. Further search by my friend revealed that one of his best dress shirts had been sacrificed to make a shirt-bouse to go with his wife's A.R.P. uniform; that a favorite pull-over had been unravelled and re-knit as a jumper, and that a favorite scarlet blazer was already in the last stages of disintegration before transformation into a smart companion to his wife's black skirt.

His wife had joined a "make-do and mend" class. Now he insists she shall mend her ways.—Leeds Yorkshire Post.

Teacher—"Who can give me an example of righteous indignation? All right, Gerald."

Gerald—"Getting mad enough to fight but never swearing."

Bugler—"I'm entering the contest for the best musician in camp. How do you think I'll come out?"

Corporal—"On a stretcher, probably."

"Your mother tells me that you have been a very bad boy, Tommy."

"Well, father, you don't want to believe all you heard around the house."

Gardener—"This, madam, is a tobacco plant."

Old Lady—"How interesting! How long will it be before the cigars are ripe?"

At the Home Guard parade, Private Green turned up with muddy boots and his rifle practically filthy. Yet the sergeant passed him by without a word.

"I say," whispered a pal, "how the heck do you get away with it?"

"Quite simple," replied Green calmly. "I keep an electrical shop and I know the blighter wants a No. 8 battery rather badly."

"What's good for my wife's fallen arches?"

"Rubber heels."

"What shall I rub 'em with?"

Doctor (gazing at patient's eye)—You say you have trouble with it. . . . But there's something more. . . . On looking at it, I see signs of liver trouble, of anemia, and I fear, of a chronic nervous affliction.

Patient—Look at the other eye. This is my glass eye, you see.

He took his best girl for tea in a restaurant. Half-way through he looked at her and smiled.

"You're gorgeous," he said. She seemed pensive.

"I may possess a hearty appetite," she replied, "but no one could truthfully call me gorgeous, dear."

Dear Health Editor: Every time I have a cup of tea I get a stabbing pain in my right eye. What shall I do?

Answer: Take the spoon out of your cup.

Groom: "Did you make this cake, dear?"

Bride: "Here's the recipe. I clipped it from a magazine."

Groom: "Are you sure you read the right side? The other side tells how to make a rock garden."

PATTERN FOR DISASTER

BY J. B. RYAN

CHAPTER IV.

CAPTAIN ROJAS favored Morgan with a reproachful glance. "Is this the way you abuse our hospitality, Lieutenant Morgan?" he murmured.

De Nova's identification of the killer isn't worth a thing," Morgan retorted quickly, hoping by his words to cover up Rojas' use of his naval rank. He admits he did not see the face of Velasquez's visitor."

De Nova said, "There was bad blood between the colonel and the American. They quarreled in the lobby."

They quarreled?" Rojas pinched his lower lip thoughtfully. "But you said Velasquez and his visitor were on friendly terms. Would the colonel have ordered whiskey brought up if the man with him was not a friend?"

De Nova smiled. "It could still be Senator Morgan. What would be more natural than that one of the two men had apologized and that Velasquez prepared himself to show that by-gones were by-gones? Only there was still anger in the American's heart. While Velasquez drank the toast of friendship, Morgan sank a knife into his host's heart."

Don Felix cleared his throat. "If I may make a suggestion, Capt. Rojas, the finding of the murderer will be simple. The killer drank with Velasquez and his glass is still on the table. Even my microscope will see that there are fingerprints on the glass. I think, if you will compare those marks with the fingerprints of Senator Morgan, I will be proven that he is the murderer."

Morgan grinned into the face of the musician. Quite agree, Don Felix. It is fortunate, indeed, that we have the glass, since there are no fingerprints on the knife handle, the haft being composed as it is of a boar's foot."

The bespectacled eyes flickered. But Guillermo reassured himself with a covert glance at De Nova and at the glass in question now being lifted carefully from the table by a policeman. Even among the wrappings the tumbler, the officer produced an ink-pad and a sheet of paper.

"Your fingerprints, Senator Morgan," he requested politely.

READILY, Morgan touched his fingers to pad and paper. As the policeman folded the sheet, the American said, "Take good care of that glass, senator. If those prints do not turn out to be mine, I insist that you check up on the remaining prints."

Capt. Rojas lifted his brows. "We shall of course do that. We are interested only in locating the guilty one."

Guillermo laughed with veiled sarcasm. "Do not let his air of injured innocence deceive you, Captain. I heard you address him as Lieutenant. It is obvious now why he came to Buenos Aires to establish himself at the Casa Grande. Miguel Velasquez was a military man and you have noted that his pockets have been emptied. The Yankee was an army secret of the Argentine Republic."

"Go ahead, Guillermo," Morgan snapped, his gray eyes glinting. "Your own words are the strands of the rope that will hang you. He faced Rojas and lifted his arm. "Search me, Captain. You will find nothing on me."

Don Felix laughed once more. "So you have been able to get away with it? I see that! I think I see the whole thing now, Capt. Rojas. Col. Velasquez has sold the plans of Argentina's coastal defenses to this disguised American officer. For all my silence I am an observant man. Morgan has said to me that he arranged an introduction to the colonel."

He paused, as if to give Morgan an opportunity to object or to explain. But Morgan remained silent. They would not believe him if he told the truth—that he had hoped that through the colonel he would meet in turn Rosita Velasquez, the girl who had been in his thoughts since he had first seen her.

Don Felix continued: "The papers will be in Morgan's room, in all probability. After securing them, he came here later to kill Velasquez, either on orders from Washington or to obtain for himself the money furnished by his government for this typically American enterprise."

Some of Morgan's assurance evaporated. Guillermo was a wily devil. The substitution of Verde's glass for that of Morgan did not mean that Morgan had turned the tables completely on this clique that headquarters had stretched its long arm to touch the knob. "The door is unlocked," grunted the musician as the door stretched his long arm to touch the knob. "The door is unlocked," grunted the musician as the door stretched his long arm to touch the knob.

But before Morgan could comply, Felix Guillermo, the one closest to the door, stretched his long arm to touch the knob. "The door is unlocked," grunted the musician as the door stretched his long arm to touch the knob.

Chris Morgan knew he had looked that door. That it was now unlocked. That he had seen the door. That he had seen the door. That he had seen the door.

Chris Morgan knew he had looked that door. That it was now unlocked. That he had seen the door. That he had seen the door. That he had seen the door.

the fourth floor. While De Nova and Guillermo had been disposing of the unfortunate Velasquez, Verde had been up here in Morgan's room planning the evidence that would ruin him.

Capt. Rojas paused in the centre of the room. "Where have you put the stuff, Morgan?"

"Perhaps Don Felix could tell you," Morgan retorted. "The manner in which he reasons out my supposed actions is nothing short of clairvoyance."

Rojas approached a small writing desk and began exploring the drawers. He turned away empty-handed and was stooping over a valise at the foot of the bed when Guillermo intervened, a faint flavor of surprise in his even-tempered voice: "You found nothing, Captain? There are no papers or wallets in the desk—nothing belonging to Col. Velasquez?"

With a stride that belied his years, Guillermo was at the escritoire, pawing anew through the drawers and shelves already examined by the policeman. The anxiety of the musician was evident that Capt. Rojas watched in surprise, and hope stirred once more within Chris Morgan.

"WHAT'S the trouble, Don Felix?" he asked. "Did your fat little friend, Senator Verde, fall down on his part of the job?"

Guillermo did not answer. He scattered Morgan's books and magazines, dumped the contents of the valise on the floor, tossed the clothes out of the wardrobe closet and even pulled the sheets and mattress from the bed. Finally he was forced to turn, defeated and sheepish, to Rojas.

"There is nothing here," he admitted, putting a trifle from the exercise alien to his years and sedentary habits.

"Hm," Capt. Rojas pursed his lips, and at last there was a flicker of friendliness in the eyes that looked upon Morgan. "Maybe that we are doing Senator Morgan an injustice. We have not even established that the fingerprints on the glass are his."

Don Felix had the grace to bow apologetically toward the American. "We shall let the glass establish the identity of Velasquez's killer."

Rojas said, "I shall not arrest you, senator, until I receive a report on the fingerprints. You will not leave the hotel until then."

"I'll be here," nodded Morgan. He followed the policeman and the musician into the hall and toward the elevator. He had allowed Don Felix to play his hand; the time had arrived for Morgan to put the screws on the whole outfit. "In readiness to me, Captain, you should see that no one else checks out from the Casa Grande in the meantime."

"No one shall leave," growled Guillermo as he stepped into the waiting lift. "Having meddled so far in this affair, I intend to work as hard as Capt. Rojas to clear things up."

Morgan placed a hand against the door the elevator boy was in the act of closing. "I mention this, Captain, because there is one guest of the hotel who does not seem to be around. It might be a good idea to find out where he is."

Rojas nodded. "To whom do you refer?"

"Senator Raymundo Verde, a supposed cattleman from Santa Rosa." As Montiel spoke he stepped back and permitted the elevator door to slide shut.

RETURNING from the elevator, Morgan had almost reached his room when he saw the door move. He moved forward quickly, almost leaping across the threshold.

A man stood in the middle of the room, a stranger, with a wide-brimmed, flat-topped hat. He wore leather boots, and about his slim waist was a metal-studded belt from which dangled a cold, snake-like whip. The man's garb was as startling as the fact that he was unknown to Morgan; only on the stage or perhaps on the pampas of the interior did Argentines wear the habiliments of the gaucho.

"Senator Morgan?" The cowboy inclined his head slightly. "My name is Esteban Velasquez. I am the nephew of the man you killed. We have come for you."

"We?" Morgan repeated. "My sister is directly behind you," explained Esteban Velasquez. As Morgan turned, the door closed with a soft sound and Rosita Velasquez was at the side of the American. "Arrra, senator," said the girl, gesturing with the automatic pistol she held in her hand. "Up with your hands!"

Morgan smiled at the girl, but her pretty olive-skinned face remained deadly serious. She moved forward deliberately and pressed the gun-muzzle against his ribs with a force that made him wince.

Next chapter, Morgan finds his plans for his life.

Desecrated Churches

Nazis Have Deprived People Of Right To Worship Openly

This happening is typical of what is occurring in churches all over Poland and in other occupied countries. Works of art are being carried away, silver and gold ritual vessels are stolen and the churches desecrated and partly destroyed or made over into garages, ballrooms, or headquarters of officers. Over 700 priests from Poland have been executed or tortured to death in Nazi concentration camps. Over 3,000 more are still prisoners. To a devout people like the Poles, this has been the most dreadful of all the dreadful things they have had to bear in the three years since the invasion of their homeland by the Nazis. Cold, hunger, and fear have walked with them and through it all they have been denied that most precious right—the right to worship openly according to their faith.

Enjoys Farm Life

English Girl Reclaims Land And Is Now Growing Food

Miss Allison Jellicoe, 25-year-old member of the famous naval family, has by sheer hard work and with very little help brought 120 acres of neglected Buckinghamshire farmland under the plough.

She is now preparing to start on another tract of 230 acres a Grade A dairy farm with an initial herd of 20 cows. Formerly she lived on her father's farm in Oxfordshire, but after war broke out she decided on farming as her war work.

Local farmers were gravely doubtful about the prospects of an apparently fragile young woman making good at farming difficult upland country, but Miss Jellicoe persisted and took over Prune Farm, near Quainton, which had been left vacant.

Here were 120 acres of land which needed development. Although Miss Jellicoe could secure the help of only a few friends, some land girls and some local labor, she managed last year to produce a bumper crop of wheat.

"Farming was originally my war job," she said. "But now it is my life job. There is no life like it."

IT HAPPENED BEFORE
A famous educator had delivered an eloquent and impressive address on the value of higher education. After the lecture there gathered about him a group of eager students seeking advice as to how they might become effective public speakers.

A pedantic young man, of the soap-box orator type, joined the group and boasted: "Well, I'm thankful to say that the Lord opened my mouth without learning."

"Ah, yes," agreed the wise old professor benignly, "a similar incident took place in Balaam's time."

A Valuable Port

Bombing Of Duisburg Is Making Transportation Hard For Nazis

Duisburg, target for R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. bombers, is well known as the largest inland port in Europe.

What this means is that roughly three-quarters of all cargoes carried on the Rhine—the principal traffic artery for coal, coke and iron ore in the Ruhr pass through Duisburg, either down river to Rotterdam or up river to Cologne, Mannheim and Karlsruhe. Some Rhine traffic also proceeds from Karlsruhe to Italy and Switzerland.

The growing inadequacy of rail transport, and the reduction of road transport to a minimum in Germany, have made it necessary for the Germans to rely more and more on water transport. The effect of an attack on the port area of Duisburg is comparable to the bombardment of locomotive production centres and the shooting up of individual locomotives.

"Lucy Linton's Stories from Life," heard each weekday morning at 9:45 from CJCA brings you short, dramatized stories as told by Aunt Lucy to her friends. They are, for the most part, short stories completed in one episode, and each is so interesting that you will want to hear the next.

"Snow Village" is the friendly eastern coast village that you have all come to know so well, and whose inhabitants have become such interesting friends. Their homey philosophy and naturalness is a treat, especially to small home town folks, and their struggles and strivings are so much your own that you will be interested in every minute of this fifteen-minute story. Be sure to listen each week day from 1:45 to 2:00 p.m. The station is CJCA and the place on your dial 930 kcs.

With daily rationing difficulties and the new problem of meat rationing confronting Canadians, the Wartime Prices and Trade Board program, "Soldier's Wife," heard over CJCA daily at 9:30 a.m. is a reliable source of timely information. This program is designed to assist Canadian homemakers with their rationing problems, giving Wartime Prices and Trade Board approved suggestions on buying for personal economy and national service. To help you to best understand the new meat rationing system, be sure and listen to "Soldier's Wife" where the system will be discussed by experts.
